Our Philosophy on Inclusion and Belonging:

Mercy Connections is made up of people from many different backgrounds and lived experiences that include various cultural, religious and language backgrounds. This may also include differing viewpoints, life circumstances and identities. We greatly value the richness that this diversity brings.

We strive to create an environment that is welcoming, safe and inclusive for each person who comes through its doors. One way that we do this is by respecting an individual's identity—whether regarding sexual orientation, gender identity, pronouns, ethnic or racial background, or any other identifying characteristics that people choose to share.

We ask that you contribute to this value of inclusion by treating all those you encounter at Mercy Connections with respect and with kindness.

Time: 1:30 pm - 3:30 pm
Where: In-person at Mercy Connections
Instructors: Melissa Lang & Peter Burns

Description: Participants will read and discuss Lord of the Flies, by William Golding. In this classic fictional novel, a group of English schoolboys find themselves on a deserted island, stranded after a plane crash. They are without adult supervision and must navigate their new surroundings in order to find a way to survive. Golding helps readers explore themes of order vs chaos, law vs anarchy, and the broader theme of good vs evil.

Each week, students will have a reading assignment of 30 - 35 pages, which the class will then discuss as a group. Participants will also be asked to produce one piece of writing each week, based on their choice of prompts provided by the instructor. Participants provide feedback to peers with the goal of helping each other become stronger writers. The class will culminate in viewing the movie of the same title.

This class is designed for native English readers, writers, and speakers. English Language Learners are welcome but need to possess an advanced level of spoken and written English. Books are provided free of charge by Vermont Humanities.
